Waterbury Center State Park

Waterbury Center State Park was established in 1986 on the southeastern shores of Waterbury Reservoir. It has become an integral recreation destination in Central Vermont and is the only water-based day-visit oriented park within Mount Mansfield State Forest.

Waterbury Reservoir, the ninth-largest body of water within Vermont, is part of a series of flood control projects designed in the 1930's by the Federal Works Progress Administration in the Winooski River watershed. The Waterbury Dam, which impounds the reservoir, was constructed over several years by the Civilian Conservation Corps members from Camp Smith, located near the dam site. The reservoir holds a summer pool with an 850 acre surface area; that is reduced in winter to between 415 - 610 acres to capture spring runoff. Waterbury Reservoir has a design capacity to store nine billion gallons of water.
